

Research on the impact of policies on my National Security and Asia's National of the United States "Return to Asia "

Cheng Ming-Wang¹、Kuang-Chung Wu²

¹Army Command and Staff College, NDU ,Taiwan, R.O.C.

²Army Command and Staff College, NDU ,Taiwan, R.O.C

Abstract

In recent years, Active American and East Asian allies in a row and gave several joint military exercises, but also to participate in regional multilateral organizations operating, showing a strong ambition and strategic expansion gesture. However, there is no improvement in the national economy on the occasion, the United States is still difficult in East Asia sustained intervention or the depth of the Chinese mainland comprehensive containment, the United States proposed "Asia-Pacific rebalancing" strategy.

The United States, the war on terror and in the morass of economic shocks, a substantial national recession, causing US military strategy pack to conserve resources. But in the Asia-Pacific region due to the rapid rise of the Chinese mainland and other disturbing factors, causing the United States to produce a sense of insecurity and threat, the United States government must respond in advance, otherwise it may exceed the control of the United States, it is proposed "return to Asia" policy . I ranked the Republic of China hub in Asia Pacific and the United States have the same enemy, naturally become an important ally the United States to return to Asia.

Taiwan's geostrategic position has put Taiwan in the middle ground of competition of the strategic interests between the U.S. and China in the Asia Pacific region, and it may serve as a triggering factor of the potential military conflicts between the two powers. How Taiwan responds to the U.S. new military deployment in the Asia Pacific region and formulates its dominant geostrategic value could be a worth pondering issue.

Key words : Return to Asia, the Asia-Pacific rebalancing, national security